Christian Wierup new Head of Research at Öhman Fondkommission

Christian Wierup has been appointed Head of Research at Öhman Fondkommission. He replaces Anders Roslund, who will instead focus on his work as engineering analyst and also be the Deputy Head of Research.

Christian Wierup will take up his duties at the beginning of May. He was previously CEO of Didner and Gerge Fonder and prior to this Head of Research at Carnegie from 2003 to 2008. Christian has also been a top-ranked retail analyst.

“We are very proud that Christian is starting with us. With this recruitment, we will continue with our focus on fundamental equity research,” said Mats Carlsson, CEO of Öhman Fondkommission.

“I share Öhman’s strategy as to how one can be a leading investment bank in the Nordic region. I know how important the focus on equity research is in order to do business with institutional clients,” says Christian Wierup.
